The Opera House, with a total number of 2,398 seats including the venue for SRO, is primarily dedicated to the staging of operas, dance dramas, etc. ballet and large theatrical festivals. It is equipped with a modern stage that can be moved up/down/back/forward or rotated, a ballet stage that can be slanting, and the up-and-down orchestra pit that can hold 90-musician orchestra. It has a reverberation time lasting for a remarkable 1.6 seconds, which meets the performance requirements of operas and dance dramas, etc.

Concert Hall

For performance tickets price (from top to the lowest)

The seating chart is just an impression drawing, for reference only.

The Concert Hall in the National Centre for the Performing Arts boasts a distinct air of exceeding serenity and refinedness and it features mainly large-scale symphonies and national music performances supplemented by occasional staging of musicals in other forms with 2,019 seats including the venue for SRO. There is the largest pipe organ all over the country, which can meet the performances requirements of all schools. And except that, such designs as digital walls, abstract relief ceiling with extremely modern aesthetic feelings, GRC walls, and tortoise shell-style central sound panel enable a symmetrical, homogeneous and gentle acoustic diffusion and reflection, which make the Hall embody an ideal integration between architectural and acoustic aesthetics.
